The Daily Argus.

The Louisiana Imbroglio.

Had President Grant gotten rid of his worthless brother-in-law Casey, as he once promised, there would be no trouble in Louisiana. The facts in the case are briefly these: By the State law certain officials are to compose a Returning Board to receive, consolidate, and announce the result of the election returns, and in event of vacancies the Governor is empowered to fill the same. There arising either a vacancy in several cases or what Governor Warmoth took to be a vacancy, he filled the same, and the question now is whether what the State Executive holds to be the Board is the Board. As will be seen it is merely a State question with which the Federal judiciary has rightfully nothing whatever to do, but by a bold and naïve impudence, Durell, a sort of Louisiana scoundrel, who has been worn out by the United States law suits, and who assumes to invalidate the Board, and orders the Federal Marshal to seize upon the State House so that there may be no secure place for the Governor's room. The marshal is ordered to go into the State house and take possession of the same, and forthwith quartered in the Senate chamber, hall of the House of Representatives and Federal Judiciary. In other words, the Government of Louisiana is to be overthrown at the point of the bayonet, and the order has been obeyed.

The reader will bear in mind that the point in issue is whether what the Governor says is the State Returning Board is the State Returning Board. The whole body of United States law for nothing if this is not a State question, to be decided by and in the State. Time and again the Supreme Court of the United States has refused itself, and forbidden its subordinate tribunals to entertain a question of this kind. Who is or who is not a Governor, what is or is not a State government, whether these men are a State government or not, are questions that belong to those men, and they would take cognizance of suits growing out of its prceedings, give them admitted officials, and their action they would review, but only this and nothing more. Judge Durell spurns all this. He plunges headlong into the forbidden ground, says this man is a State officer and that man is not, and denies that the State House is a Government, and that the State House is a Government is not questioned by any one at all.—N. Y. World.

An exchange gives the following simple recipe for "greasing the griddle." "Take a turnip, cut it in half and rub the griddle with the inner side, and you will find that cakes will come off nice and smooth, and you will be rid of the disagreeable odor of burning fat."
